

Forecast For Scotland
Issued by Met Office Aberdeen
at 1600 on Thursday 09 Dec 2021

++ Valid for broadcast between 1800 and 0600

Headline:

Cold tomorrow. Showers focused in northwest. East largely dry.

This Evening and Tonight:

Band of occasionally heavy rain and summit snow soon extending east to all early evening, before clearing to showers late evening, these focused in northwest, and turning wintry across quite modest heights. Risk ice patches away from west coast.

Friday:

Cold but mostly dry and bright in east. Cloudier across north and west with showers, these heavy, perhaps thundery, at first. Fresh or, around coasts, strong westerly winds easing gradually.

Outlook for Saturday to Monday:

Rain Saturday, locally heavy across western hills. Thereafter quite unsettled with showers or longer periods of rain, but east seeing best of shelter. Chance severe gales overnight Sunday in north.

(C) Crown Copyright 2021. Published by the Met Office.